

Parents are entitled to access their child's records, including attendance records, test scores, grades, disciplinary records, health records, student evaluations and reports of behavioral patterns as well as review teaching materials, including textbooks and aids.